Headteacher's Weekly Message

Dear parents and carers,

An amazingly busy week here at school. We had 2 authors in school for World Book Day and the children loved hearing their stories and poems. The children looked fantastic in their costumes and night clothes and the lunchtime parade was terrific.

We have a school adviser in next week and I'm sure they are going to be impressed by the progress we have made in school.

I hope you have a great weekend and see you all on Monday. Mr Hilton

We are pleased to announce that 8 chicks have hatched. The children and staff were so excited watching the different stages of them hatching and growing. Well done Mr Sambrooks for organising this event. Next week there will be an opportunity for the children to have a timetabled supervised visit where, should they wish to, they will be able to hold them.

Mission Together

On Monday, Deacon Tom from Mission Together came to tell us about how the money we raise during Lent will help children in another part of the world.

Their 'Together in India' project supports families in a village in Chennai, who were moved far away so that expensive flats and shops could be built. These families then struggled to get to work or go to school. We thought about unfair this was, and how the people were not treated with respect.

Thankfully, there are Religious Sisters who are helping to share God's love by teaching the children how to stay safe and running evening classes. By sharing our money, we can help these important tasks continue.

Deacon Tom reminded us that we can achieve so much when we work together. We can also help by praying, asking God to keep them in His care. Praying for others is like reaching out hands of friendship across the world.

Hope you find our new noticeboard place by the entrance gate full on up and coming helpful information.

Our World Book Day

Thank you, Mrs Smith, for organising a fantastic World Book Day. The children had great fun in the workshops with the visiting authors, Kathy Henderson and Nigel Blackman, especially working on the Big Book which will be on display in our new library. They all looked cosy in their pajamas and the book characters looked amazing. The parade on the playground at lunch time created a great excitement.

There are more photos of the day on the website and on our Instagram site.
